

Climate change encompasses long-term alterations in temperature and weather patterns. While natural occurrences, like solar activity changes or volcanic eruptions, can contribute, human actions have been the dominant driver since the 19th century. This is largely attributed to the burning of fossil fuels (coal, oil, gas), which releases greenhouse gases. These gases act as a blanket, trapping solar heat and causing a rise in global temperatures.