

The use of the antibiotics “Tablets” without a doctor's prescription is one of the challenging of the study finding or is consider the topics of interest that require further research among Darfur University College student, South Darfur State, Sudan. ● The current study found that the sources of drinking water has been suspected to have a high impact in the transmission of the organism. ● The study findings show more than 51.4% use municipal tap water has also been suspected to have a high impact in the transmission of the organism. It has also been reported that more than 25% of the respondent use other sources of drinking water. Thus outcome is an agreement with previous published article by K