Despite a decade or more of restructuring and downsizing, many U.S. companies are still unprepared to operate in the 1990s.The usual methods for boosting performance--process rationalization and automation--haven't yielded the dramatic improvements companies need.In a time of rapidly changing technologies and ever-shorter product life cycles, product development often proceeds at a glacial pace.