They contribute to the creation of efficient and well-organized software by guiding developers through the initial stages of design and implementation.