

Consumer behavior is the series of choices a person makes that culminate in the acquisition of a specific good or service. The buyer behavior model has marketing incentives (product – price – place – promotion) and marketing incentives that help marketers better design their products and marketing messages to suit the desires of their customers.