IntroductionFlorence Nightingale did not only develop the 1 rst school of nursingbut was also committed. to training nurses for the nursing professionand that's why the Florence Nightingale's model of "training" spreadquickly throughout the world and successfully improved the quality ofnursing services [1]. Currently, nursing education in Saudi Arabia hasbeen given an utmost consideration to cope with the recentrequirements of nursing education in the developed countries. Eisutmost consideration has come from the realization that education forprofessional nursing is the backbone of the health services and plays avital role in the promotion of health and quality of life. Consequently, nursing input in health care delivery is important to achieve health forall [2] and in the Saudi society, nursing in uences and is in uenced by the values and socio-cultural forces. De Mohammad Al-Mana College for Health Sciences began as anInstitute. De institute was up-graded in 2008 to a college, obered thethree year-nursing Diploma program parallel to a bachelor in nursing. 12 composition of the nursing curriculum is in 13 uenced by the Ministry of Education, faculty and nursing requirements. Nursing requirements include all courses related to preparing students for thenursing profession and licensure. Te Inal year of the course is aninternship period in clinical practice, overing the students theopportunity to consolidate their skills and knowledge. Te curriculumfor the nursing program is covered over Tve years which are allocatedto lectures, laboratory work and clinical practice and are all deliveredthrough the medium of English language... Te enrollment of female to the nursing profession has been bjected by both Saudi parents and students as they were concerned that female and male will work together in a mix working environment and that they will be away from home due to the long working hoursand shiss duty. Se image of nursing in Saudi Arabia has been changing gradually from holding very negative attitudes to .positiveattitudes towards the profession