

In my opinion, all three solutions are viable, but the third one – making a concrete project plan – is preferable because it addresses the core issue of poor planning while also incorporating elements of the other solutions.