

The product is designed to be robust and resilient, ensuring that small variations in production or assembly processes do not negatively impact its functionality or performance