

Soil pollution means the introduction of foreign substances into the soil or an increase in the concentration of one of its natural components, which may cause a change in the chemical and physical composition of the soil. These substances are called soil pollutants