

Social Comparison Theory explains how people judge themselves by comparing to others, impacting self-worth. Social media's curated content intensifies this, leading to negative self-evaluation, inadequacy, and potentially worsening mental health due to unrealistic ideals