

David Held defines political theory as “a network of concepts and generalizations about political life ,involving ideas, assumptions and statements about the nature