

Cord blood is the blood left inside your baby's umbilical cord after delivery. It also contains a special type of stem cell found in bone marrow that can help strengthen the immune system. It's similar to regular blood and contains red and white blood cells, platelets and plasma. Their ability to morph into other cells makes them valuable.