

This model is the Third Generation–1990s. In this model, attributes and methods that operate on those attributes are encapsulated in structures called object classes. Relationships between object classes are shown, in part, by nesting or encapsulating one object class within another