

As developing countries become more industrialised. They increase their use of resources. As some point. The land needed to sustain each person on earth might exceed the amount of land that is available.