

Hospitals have faced significant financial strain during the pandemic, with increased expenses for personal protective equipment (PPE), staffing, and infrastructure. Moreover, elective procedures were postponed or cancelled, leading to a decline in revenue