

Your strategies for leveraging C++ in game optimization can qualify as primary research if they involve novel contributions. In contrast, established techniques like parallel computing and design patterns need significant improvements or adaptations to meet primary research criteria.