

The library is an incentive that provides and provides a source of information and science to mankind. To ensure high-quality information, college libraries should be considered as part of the process of procuring library materials for the fulfillment of information needed by users and the development of a collection of reliable sources of information. A library with the absence or lack of adequate collection, then the library will have difficulty providing maximum service to the user. Collection development is a work activity of the library that provides and provides information resources and services for users in accordance with the needs, desires and interests of users (Soeatimah, 1991). In fact, a library is a room, part of a building, or the building itself, used to store books and other publications that are generally stored according to the order of data to be used. (Basuki, 1991). The main thing of the library itself is the collection or library material, therefore it is necessary to raise the development of collections
