

Their responses are strengthened through practice and repetitions of the utterances they imitate, and corrections and other reactions that adults provide help children produce the correct responses, and hence develop the right habits