

The challenges of professional success today, the difference between today's customer-facing model and the past, and how the salesperson has transformed into a personal advisor who offers suggestions and takes initiatives in the best interest of the customer