

An overview of the rapid progress in the developments of the inorganic light emitting diode (LED) technology is presented. This article summarizes the recent progress of the high brightness LEDs, and describes the LED structures from the basic pn homojunction, to heterojunction, and eventually the use of nano-scale low-dimensional structures in the device fabrication.