

Processor architecture Processor architecture The control unit The control unit is the set of devices coordinating the operation of the computer in order to make it execute the sequence of operations specified in the program instructions