

INTRODUCTION The characterization of modern societies as ?information societies?Success and failure of indi- vidual and collective actors alike depend increasingly on their ability to accumulate and ?distribute information.Rather, it needs systematic planning in order to reach its goals.?Output