

Mechanics Physics, the most fundamental physical science, is concerned with the fundamental principles of the Universe. It is the foundation upon which the other sciences--astronomy, biology, chemistry, and geology--are based