

In recent years, agriculture has faced increasing challenges due to factors such as climate change, water scarcity, and the need for sustainable practices to meet the rising demand for food. Using technologies such as Internet of Things (IoT) modules such as a humidity sensor enables design intelligence and innovation. Traditional irrigation methods often result in water wastage, inefficient usage, and suboptimal crop yields.