

By prioritizing the human dimension, architects create environments that are more enjoyable and functional for users, leading to greater satisfaction and a sense of connection to the space