

More difficult to standardize than products – Variability associated with human element is much more likely to creep into the production of services than into the production of products