

The poet feels sorry for a sick young woman who looks like a rose. This lady has fallen victim to an unreal and unfaithful love. She is sick with her love of losing her reputation in the hands of a dishonest man. This selfish love is like a loud storm that comes quickly and destroys what comes in its way