

Based on a report released by energy and climate think-tank Ember, Turkiye's roof solar potential could offset 45% of electricity demand. While Turkiye is seriously lagging on its solar goals, its rooftop solar potential is 10 times its current installed capacity, meaning progress can still be made