

Marx types: 01.(Spinal cord injury, Cleveland Clinic) (Facebook and Rehabilitation Encyclopedia) Fourth:
Various congenital malformations: These are various congenital malformations that are distinguished or determined by non-distinction, except during abnormal pregnancy, and affect other bones or bones, and compensate for these deformities either in the form of a deficiency in bones, or a strange curvature in the bones. The two parts (spinal cord injury) and feel the damage to the spinal cord and the work near it, and the injured person will suffer from the sensation and functions of the cord in different parts of his body and suffer from a slight decrease in two parts, and these wounds are classified into two different types, the two parts complete: a full month of total paralysis in parts of the body located somewhere in the lower part of the body, so the injured person may suffer from upper paralysis under the ground or quadriplegia that affects all affected limbs. Spinal cord, (chronic nerve disease, other chronic diseases in the blood vessels).