

Singapore has a large number of water catchment areas, many roof tops, expressways, main roads, canals, islands, car-parks for installing solar panels. These should only be secondary activities, not primary activities for reducing urban heat in Singapore. Structures can also be built across 2 similarly tall buildings to contain urban hydroponics / aquaponics farms with rainwater collection system and solar panels to reduce urban heat, flooding and power supply problems in Singapore.