

Building a large wall around the city would have required significant physical strength and effort from the workers, as it involved moving heavy materials and constructing a strong, protective barrier for the city