You might see information security used interchangeably with cyber security.Cyber security is a vast field, and you will encounter terms like cyber resilience, cyber threat, and cyber risk.Information security looks at securing information in any form, including digital and printed formats, while cyber security is focused on protecting digital data, the systems upon which the data sits, and networks via which the data can be accessed.