

This study analyzes the role of digital transformation in enhancing local governance and achieving sustainable urban development. Ultimately, the study concludes that digital transformation serves as a crucial leverage for development. Furthermore, it proposes an analytical framework outlining the institutional, organizational, and technological conditions needed to modernize local administration. Utilizing a descriptive–analytical approach, it conceptualizes digital transformation, local governance, and sustainable development.