

Before investing in any kind of marketing effort, it's important to first create and build a strong personal brand. You should be able to clearly explain what you're doing, embody what sets you apart from your competitors, and formulate uniform messages.