I am writing to the Dean to report an incident where a classmate developed itching and rashes on both arms after consuming a snack from the college cafeteria. It is essential for the college cafeteria to display notices for students with food allergies to prevent similar occurrences. The incident occurred in the college cafeteria after the first session. I was with my classmates, and we had just finished our first session when this happened. My classmate experienced itching and rashes on both arms. They felt uncomfortable and concerned. After the incident, my classmate had to seek medical attention and inform the college authorities. My classmate reported back to class after seeking medical attention. Displaying notices for students with food allergies in the cafeteria can help raise awareness and prevent such incidents in the future. This is crucial for ensuring the well-being and safety of all students.
