The educational system in the United Arab Emirates (UAE) has significantly evolved since the country's formation in 1971, shaped by historical, cultural, and socio-economic factors.Cultural and Historical Influences Islamic Values: The educational framework reflects Islamic principles, emphasizing moral and religious instruction alongside academic subjects.Quality Education Initiatives (2000s): Creation of organizations such as the Abu Dhabi Education Council (ADEC) focused on improving educational quality through standardized assessments and reforms aligned with international standards.Establishment of the UAE (1971): The newly formed government prioritized education, establishing the Ministry of Education and implementing the first education law in 1972 to promote national identity and socio-economic development.Here are the key milestones and influences: Pre-1971 Education: Education was informal, focusing on religious teachings and basic literacy, primarily conducted in mosques and through community gatherings.The establishment of the UAE University in 1976 marked a crucial step in higher education.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com