

The growing energy demands of our population and our reliance on fossil fuels are driving global warming, disturbing habitats far beyond human population centers, for example, (d) by melting Arctic Sea ice, which is prime hunting habitat