

Most prize winners are not used to having money and making financial decisions. Winners may lose large sums on investments they know nothing about, or they might go in with a partner who may not know how to run a business. They are vulnerable and become easy prey to people who want to take advantage of them.