

The Computer science is about problem solving, but problem solving is not exclusive to computer science. Problem solving involves understanding the problem and the entities involved, identifying deficiencies, and determining desired objectives.