

Academically oriented, preparing students for the matriculation examination, which is the first high-stakes national exam. Graduates can enter the workforce directly or continue to universities of applied sciences. It includes significant on-the-job training through apprenticeships.