

Introduction: Most chemical reactions are accompanied by a measurable absorption or evolution of heat energy. Using Hess's Law, we can combine several combustion reactions to calculate standard enthalpies of formation. In a bomb calorimeter, we measure the energy of combustion of a sample.