

Climate change-induced environmental changes, such as sea-level rise, drought, and extreme weather events, can displace communities from their homes and livelihoods.