

Within the larger subject of public health, global health is a specialist study, a branch of health sciences, and a guiding philosophy.