

Stacey Davison is one of three million tourists who chose to visit Costa Rica this year. “We wanted to explore a country that was largely unspoiled by development. Oh my goodness, we got exactly what we were looking for. We saw beautiful beaches, lush rainforests, and exotic wildlife.” Stacey is particularly excited about a wildlife refuge she and her husband visited during their trip. “It took four hours by bus to get there along an unpaved road, but it was so beautiful that it was worth it. We hiked trails and took a tour through the rainforest canopy. Our guide showed us how to stick a stick into a termite nest for a snack (they have a nutty flavor!), and how to use live leafcutter ants to create stitches for cutting. It was absolutely amazing.”
