

Proponents of boycotting Israeli products see it as a moral obligation to hold Israel accountable for its actions in the occupied territories. They argue that economic pressure can influence Israeli policies and push for a resolution to the conflict. Furthermore, they view boycotting as a form of nonviolent resistance that aligns with international efforts to promote human rights and justice.