

This theory emphasized the diversity of audiences and the role of social and cultural factors in shaping how media messages are received and interpreted.