

I've had a great experience building a positive relationship to solve a problem. We were able to collaborate effectively, and the outcome was a successful project that exceeded our expectations. There was a time when I was working on a group project, and there was a team member who seemed disengaged and uninterested in contributing. Instead of getting frustrated, I decided to take a proactive approach.