

Phoning and Sending messages Talking on a cell phone and texting a message are two ways that people use to communicate with each other. It is a short form of communication that is exchanged with abbreviations and emojis. Moreover, it is less expensive and suits older people. Calling someone is always more effective than texting them.