

Marketers want to understand how the stimuli are changed into responses inside the consumer's black box, which has two parts.