

Such errors can be avoided by air-conditioning, magnetic shielding, cleaning the instruments, and housing the instruments properly depending on the application and type of the instrument